

PhD Scholarships in English & Creative Writing at the University of Roehampton

The University of Roehampton is pleased to invite applications to its TECHNE-funded doctoral programmes in English & Creative Writing.

TECHNE is an Arts and Humanities Research Council Doctoral Training Partnership providing an outstanding graduate training experience, drawing together the best of traditional scholarship, history, theory and practice across seven higher education institutions in London and the South East with extensive collaboration from 13 world-leading partners including the Natural History Museum, the V&A, the Science Museum, the BFI and the Barbican. For more information, please visit: www.techne.ac.uk

The Department of English and Creative Writing has a vibrant and active research culture and we were successful in securing a number of TECHNE awards in the last round: <http://www.roehampton.ac.uk/english-and-creative-writing/research> Further information about the research interests of individual staff members is also available on our website. We prefer applicants to hold a Distinction or equivalent at Masters level, though all applications will be considered. Candidates must contact the department with information on their research proposal before submitting an application. Please email ECWTechne@roehampton.ac.uk at least one week before the application deadline.

Deadline to apply: 7 February 2015

Applications and further information available at:

<http://www.roehampton.ac.uk/Courses/Graduate-School/TECHNE-AHRC-Studentships/>

Completed applications and any enquiries should be directed to:

TECHNE@roehampton.ac.uk