

This compulsory module, alongside an additional autumn term compulsory module entitled Harms, Crime and Power, will lay the foundation for MA studies in criminology and criminal justice. The module will locate the discipline of Criminology within its cultural and historical context and will examine a range of responses to crime, including policing, probation, the criminal justice process and prisons, as well as different conceptualisations of and contexts for justice, including international justice (e.g. human rights law, the ICC), environmental justice and restorative justice. The module will develop students' critical thinking and communication skills by drawing on a range of interdisciplinary perspectives and research studies to offer an intellectually rigorous criminological introduction to the study of crime control and justice.